I am a physician by training, with a PhD in immunology of viral infections, and eight years of clinical practice experience in a teaching hospital in Poland in the field of infectious diseases. Between 1997-2000, I have worked at the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) as part of the Epidemic Intelligence Service (EIS) and later as a medical epidemiologist. Since 2007, I have been working at the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control as a Deputy Head of the Unit (first of the Scientific Advice Unit, then the Office of the Chief Scientist and now of the Disease Programme Unit) and, since April 2011, as the Deputy Chief Scientist of the Centre. I have published on topics such as vaccination, influenza, burden of disease, use of electronic medical records for research, epidemiologic methodology in general and others.
