Diverse Forestry Systems and Cleaner Production Practices for the Bio-Based Economy and Sustainable Development

Message from the Guest Editors

Innovative and sustainable forestry practices are imperative to address sustainability challenges in the current decade of ecosystem restoration. In this regard, we aim to congregate the notable research for addressing the diverse issues of forestry practices developed for improving human well-being and meeting the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals. We are looking for original research, reviews, short communications, monographs, or opinions related (but not limited) to:1) Forest landscape restoration for bioenergy parks, aesthetic development, and other benefits;2) Innovative forestry systems in urbs, sub-urbs, and agriscapes for sustaining green spaces;3) Urban forestry and management practices for multipurpose benefits and sustainable cities;4) Sustainability assessments of community and urban forestry practices;5) Phytochemicals and value-added byproducts from sustainable forestry systems;6) Agroforestry as a sustainable approach towards bioeconomy.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Forests (ISSN 1999-4907) is an international and cross-disciplinary, scholarly forestry journal. The distinguished editorial board and refereeing process ensures the highest degree of scientific rigor and review of all published articles. Original research articles and timely reviews are released online, with unlimited free access. Our goal is to have Forests be recognized as one of the foremost publication outlets for high quality, leading edge research in this broad and diverse field. We therefore invite you to be one of our authors, and in doing so share your important research findings with the global forestry community.
