

Statement from The Lenfest Institute for Journalism:

“Millions of people around the United States access news and information from digital platforms every single day. The platforms rely on quality publishers to fill their feeds and search results to provide factual information and to stop the spread of dis- and- misinformation. To ensure a fair playing field, The Lenfest Institute for Journalism believes news publishers should be able to negotiate fairly with companies that depend on their journalism.”