Come, blue-eyed maid of heaven! - but thou, alas,	1
Didst never yet one mortal song inspire -
Goddess of Wisdom! here thy temple was,	3
And is, despite of war and wasting fire,
And years, that bade thy worship to expire:	5
But worse than steel, and flame, and ages slow,
Is the drear sceptre and dominion dire	7
Of men who never felt the sacred glow
That thoughts of thee and thine on polished breasts bestow.	9