BUSINESS permanency can only be secured through a stable foundation. Quality and merit are the essential ingredients in the masonry of a business institution built to stay.

Piano merchants in order to build successfully must have instruments of character—instruments whose merits are known to the purchasing masses and whose reputation is unassailable—whose position in the musico-industrial world is fixed. For eighty-five years has occupied an unapproachable position in the world's select art circles. The name of Chickering is inseparably associated with the piano industry and pianos bearing that name have helped to build the reputation of many worthy piano merchants in all parts of the country.

The Chickering Piano
