

Becoming A Braver Angel In Your Own World

Recognizing My Inner Polarizer

You can use the following questions to think about your inner polarizer. Don't worry: most of us think and feel some of these things.

1.	How often do I find myself thinking about “those people” on the other political side without much regard for the variation among them? (Usually we're aware of great variation within our own group.)	Often	Sometimes	Never
2.	How often do I find myself assigning mainly self-serving or negative motives to the other group—and mainly positive motives to my group?	Often	Sometimes	Never
3.	How often do I find myself focusing on the most extreme or outrageous ideas and people on the other side, thereby making it hard to see how a reasonable person could remain in that group?	Often	Sometimes	Never
4.	How often do I find myself comparing the worst people on the other side with the best people on my side?	Often	Sometimes	Never
5.	How often do I feel a “rush” of pleasure with friends when we ridicule those crazies on the other political side?	Often	Sometimes	Never
6.	Which of the following is closest to my overall emotional attitude towards the majority of people who support the other side?	Hate. They are enemies out to destroy the country. Disdain. They are ignorant and should know better. Pity. They are well meaning but duped. Basic respect. They make contributions even if they are mostly off base. Respect and appreciation. They make unique and necessary contributions.
