RE: Climate Change and Environmental-Related Risks Survey Reissued for Broader Participation

The Cayman Islands Monetary Authority (the "Authority") is advising all regulated entities that the Climate Change and Environmental-Related Risks survey has been reissued to facilitate broader participation and resultantly achieve a higher response rate.

Climate-related risks pose significant challenges as well as opportunities for the financial sector. The insights gathered from this survey will enable us to better assess the current landscape, identify key areas of concern, and develop informed policies and strategies to mitigate these risks. Your input will be vital in shaping the jurisdiction's collective response to climate change and ensuring the resilience and sustainability of our industry.

We urge all regulated entities to participate in this survey promptly and thoroughly. If you have already completed the initial survey, there is no need to submit another response.
